Russian Forces Landed at Novorossisk

CABLING from Moscow that the Russian drive to the Dnieper bend continues, Reuter's Special Correspondent says that Cossack cavalry and tanks are moving forward towards Zaporozhe, "sole escape bridge of German forces in the Crimea."

Another report states that bitter fighting is still going on near Novorossisk, where a big Russian force was landed from warships of the Red Fleet on Saturday.

Harassing the retreating Germans as they fall back on the wide arc from Kharkov to the Azov Sea, the Red Army is giving them no time to lay minefields to delay the pursuit, Reuter Correspondent says. At one end of the arc Russian spearheads are now only 15 miles from Pavlograd and 45 miles from Dnepropetrovsk. At the other, Cossack cavalry and tanks are advancing over the Nogaisk steppe towards Zaporozhe. Other Russian forces further north are almost within striking distance of two more vital rail junctions controlling new approaches to the Dnieper and Kiev.

The troops which opened the southern flank of the Kharkov salient are 30 miles beyond Krasnograd to the west and on the road to Poltava, capture of which would open to them the 75-mile stretch of railway to the third Dnieper bridge at Kremenchug.

Along the River Psiol and in the Sumi sector the Germans have made their most determined stand in the past few weeks, counter-attacking often and fiercely with shock panzer divisions, heavy artillery barrages and substantial air support. Zenkov, on the northern flank of the salient, has changed hands several times.

In the Northern Ukraine new advances along the railway from Konotop have brought the Soviet troops within 15 miles of Nezhin, junction of the single track line which is the only lateral communication left to the Germans before Kiev, 70 miles beyond. Fighting there is heavy, with the Germans throwing more reserves and 'planes into this battle for the distant approaches to Kiev.

New concentrations of Russian forces in the Leningrad area were reported last night by Paris radio. German coastal batteries had heavily shelled military installations in Kronstadt harbour, the announcer said.—(Reuter.)

Russian forces are also pressing in from north and south towards Roslavl, threatening to cut off Bryansk from the rear and bisect the railway to Smolensk. From the Russian side reinforcements are pouring through Yelnya to a front 40 miles east of this greatest German base.

The Soviet communiqué states that more than 240 inhabited places were captured yesterday and advances made as follows:—Six to 18 miles S.-W. of Stalino, 5 to 12 miles in the Priluki direction, 6 to 7 miles in the direction of Nezhin, 4 to 5 miles towards Roslavl, 2½ to 3½ miles in the Bryansk direction, and 2 to 2½ miles S.-W. of Kharkov.

IN THE KUBAN

Heavy fighting in the area of Novorossisk and in the Kuban Peninsula was reported by a German High Command statement, quoted by German Radio last night. A Russian landing near Novorossisk and signs of an impending Red Army offensive against the Kuban bridgehead were reported by Berlin on Saturday. "More Russian reinforcements are constantly being brought up on the coastal road south-east of Novorossisk," the Radio said. "In the Eastern Novorossisk region very bitter battles are in full swing. West of Krimskaya and on both sides of the Kuban bridgehead fighting is increasing in intensity. All enemy thrusts were halted.

"Renewed enemy attacks east of Mariupol were repelled, but north of Krasnoarmeisk and between Sevsk and Bryansk the enemy made temporary breaches in our lines."

The German communiqué stated: "In the central sector of the front local attacks were repelled, and cavalry and tank forces which had managed to break through were severed from their communications. In the northern sector the day, on the whole, was quiet."

Jean Paquis, Paris Radio commentator, said last night:—

"The war is starting. The Russian offensive, which a few days ago was believed to have weakened or, at least, to be at last weakening, to-day has assumed a tremendous violence. On a front reaching from the Desna river to the Sea of Azov, five Russian Army groups are attacking on the Axis front."

Hull Calls for International Unity

MR. CORDELL HULL, U.S. Secretary of State, broadcasting last night on U.S. foreign policy, called for "the creation of a system of international relations based on rules of morality, law and justice, as distinguished from the anarchy of unbridled and discordant nationalism, economic and political." The outstanding characteristics of such a system must be liberty under the law for nations as well as individuals, he said.

"Throughout our national history our basic policy with foreign nations has rested upon certain beliefs deeply rooted in the minds of our people. Among these are:—(1) All peoples who, with a decent respect to the opinions of mankind, have qualified themselves to assume and discharge responsibilities of liberty are entitled to its enjoyment; (2) each sovereign nation, large or small, is in law the equal of every other nation; (3) all nations which respect the rights of others are entitled to freedom from outside interference; (4) willingness to settle international disputes by peaceful means and acceptance of international law and observance of its principles are the basis of order among nations and of mankind's continuing search of enduring peace."

Alleged Dealing in 1½ Tons of Tobacco

Bridget Uniacke, of Shore road, Belfast, was remanded, in custody, at Belfast on Saturday, charged with having been knowingly concerned in dealing in one and a half tons of uncustomed tobacco with intent to defraud the Customs authorities.

Uniacke, it was stated by a police officer, said that she knew nothing about the tobacco found in her home.

It was stated for the prosecution that the duty-paid value of the tobacco was between £7,000 and £8,000, and that Mrs. Uniacke had £1,950 in the Eire Savings Bank and her husband £1,500. The Customs authorities had information that the husband had bought a public-house in Eire.

Japanese Retreat from Salamaua

Japanese forces are in full retreat from Salamaua, New Guinea, with Allied troops in pursuit, says Reuter. "The enemy line was broken by troops advancing from the south. Our casualties were slight—only a small fraction of those we inflicted."

Military Service For All in Eire?

"NOT only for the present, but for a long time afterwards, we will need the manhood of the country to be trained as they are at present in the voluntary forces, and, if we cannot have them in the volunteer forces, it may be necessary for the existence of this nation that compulsory service will be introduced."

So declared Mr. de Valera at a march-past of the North Louth defence forces in Dundalk yesterday. "Let no one think," he added, "that the danger is past. You are in a stronger position now because of what you have learned and done than you were two or three years ago. We must build on that strength to become stronger.

"We were," he said, "looking ahead some years before the war when we established the volunteer forces. It was a tremendous help when this emergency began, but it was not anything like the strength we had hoped for, because the people did not realise until the war came how necessary it was for us to have our people trained and equipped, and we could probably have equipped them much better before the war began than was possible after the war broke out. We must never in this country allow this situation to arise again. The time for preparation is before the danger arises.

SMALL NATIONS

"This country," said Mr. de Valera, "is a small nation, and, situated as we are, we are going to be in danger until the last shot of the war is fired. Until the war is definitely over there can be no room for slackening off on our part. We must be as keen to-day to prepare ourselves for defence as we were two or three years ago. We have no idea what turns the war may take. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary for us to be as active in preparation now and until the war ends as before. Even when the war ends there is bound to be a long period of disturbance in the world. We will need our defence forces then and long after it, because, as the world is going at present, small nations will have to put forth their full strength if they are going to continue in existence."

Mussolini Freed

—BERLIN

THE German News Agency last night issued this communiqué from Hitler's headquarters:—

"German parachutists and men of the Security Service and the armed S.S. to-day performed an operation for the liberation of Mussolini who had been imprisoned by the clique of traitors.

"The coup succeeded. The Duce is at liberty. The handing over of the Duce to the Anglo-Americans agreed to by the Badoglio Government has thus been frustrated."—(Reuter.)

Allied Leaders' Appeal

A joint appeal from President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill to Marshal Badoglio and the people of Italy was broadcast at regular intervals during the week-end.

Urging them to "win back for Italy an honourable place in the civilisation of Europe," it said: "Now is the time for every Italian to strike his blow. The liberating armies of the Western World are coming to your rescue. The German terror in Italy will not last long."

Kerry Opposes Road Transport Pool

Merchant motor lorry-owners from all parts of Kerry, at a public meeting in Tralee on Saturday, united in a protest against the Government's lorry pooling scheme, "which gives the railway company a monopoly over all road freight transport."

Mr. M. J. O'Connor, General Secretary, said the effect of the scheme, as applied to many counties, was that lorry-owners must pay 6 per cent. of all their earnings to the G.S.R. for the privilege of using their own lorries.

Mr. Finucane, T.D., assured the meeting of the support of the Kerry Farmers' Association.

A resolution was passed protesting against "the rumoured extension of the monopoly of road transport granted to the G.S.R. Co. to County Kerry, and we assure the Government that we, the private lorry-owners of Kerry, will take all possible steps to prevent the extension." A further resolution demanded that when the emergency ceases private owners should be afforded equal treatment in the matter of supplies.

Cork Dislikes Senate

Further criticisms of the method of election to the Senate were made at Cork County Committee of Agriculture on Saturday.

Mr. D. L. O'Gorman commented on the fact that on the Agricultural Panel not one member was elected from Cork, the largest county, although Cavan, a small county, had two elected on that panel. Of the 43 elected Senators, nineteen had given a Dublin address, and two an address in Dalkey, so that half those elected were from Dublin. He proposed that they write to An Taoiseach, asking for a different system of election.

Mr. M. J. Corry, T.D., proposing that they should also ask for the abolition of the Senate, said there were thirty Senate voters in Cork City and County, and, if they did not elect three or four on the Agricultural Panel, it was their own look-out. Both motions were passed.

Mr. Churchill and Northern Ireland

In a reply to a congratulatory message from the Speaker and members of the Senate of Northern Ireland, Mr. Churchill, from Washington, stated: "The courageous and steadfast attitude of Northern Ireland has throughout been of inestimable value to the common cause."

SECRET TALKS LED TO ARMISTICE

Italy Promised to Side With Allies

THE FULL STORY OF THE NEGOTIATIONS WHICH LED UP TO THE SIGNING OF THE MILITARY ARMISTICE WITH ITALY WAS DISCLOSED LAST NIGHT IN LONDON, FOLLOWING PUBLICATION OF THE THIRTEEN-POINT PEACE TERMS IMPOSED ON THE BADOGLIO GOVERNMENT.

Almost immediately after the fall of Mussolini the Badoglio Government began making secret overtures to the Allies, but a month elapsed before the Armistice was signed.

British representatives in two neutral countries were first approached, and an Italian general with full authority from Badoglio said, in effect, that when the Allies landed the Italian Government were prepared to join them against Germany.

As evidence of the genuineness of Italy's peace intention, the Badoglio Government released General Carton de Wiart, V.C., from a prisoner of war camp, and he accompanied the Italian general to Lisbon.

The Italian Government were first given the Allies' conditions at a meeting in Lisbon.

Immediately the meeting ended (states the Press Association) an Italian General hurried back to Rome with the terms. Owing to the extreme secrecy of his mission, however, the return journey took longer than was expected.

The Italian Government evidently became anxious about the emissary's failure to reappear according to schedule and therefore despatched a second General to Lisbon. It was with this second General that General Carton de Wiart travelled. He had been placed by the Italian Government under no obligation to return to Italy and was therefore instructed by the British Government to return to England, where his arrival was kept secret lest the news should lead the German Government to guess that approaches to the Allies had been made by the Italian Government.

"DESPERATE"

It was in the first week in August, almost a month before the armistice was signed and over a month before the announcement was made, that British representatives in two neutral countries were approached by Italian diplomatists acting on instructions from the Italian Government. Both explained that the situation in Italy was desperate, and the second emissary declared authoritatively that he had been sent by Marshal Badoglio to discuss Armistice negotiations.

He was informed that the only terms which the Allied Governments would accept would be unconditional surrender. There followed a series of journeys and meetings, each one of which had to be conducted under a veil of extreme secrecy.

The second move came in the middle of August. It was then that an Italian General, travelling to Portugal, ostensibly on another mission, presented himself with credentials from Marshal Badoglio to Sir Samuel Hoare, the British Ambassador at Madrid, and the following day to Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell, British Ambassador at Lisbon.

"I have come," the Italian General said, in effect, "with full authority from Marshal Badoglio, to say that when the Allies land in Italy the Italian Government are prepared to join them against Germany."

This was immediately reported to the British Government, who at once informed the Governments of the United States and Russia and General Eisenhower. The British and American Governments decided to inform the Italian Government, through the Italian General, of the conditions upon which they would be prepared to cease hostilities against Italy.

FINAL TERMS

The emissary was told that it was for the Italians, by their behaviour, to influence the Allies in applying the final terms. Much would depend on how far the Italian Government and people in fact aided the United Nations against Germany during the remainder of the war.

The Italian General left immediately for Rome with the terms, but, as already stated, he took some time over his return journey. It was then that the second General was despatched from Rome with General Carton de Wiart.

The first Italian General then arrived in Sicily with the answer of the Italian Government. The answer was that the Italian Government, had they been a free agent, would have been prepared to do what the Allies wished. They were, however, under the control of the Germans, and it was, therefore, impossible for them to announce the armistice before the main Allied landing in Italy.

ACCEPTANCE

The envoy was told that the Allies were not prepared to vary the arrangements, and he returned to Rome to consult his Government. The Allies demanded a final answer within twenty-four hours. Next day a message was received at General Eisenhower's headquarters by secret methods of communication stating that the Italian Government accepted, and that their representatives would return to sign the armistice.

On September 3, a month after the first Italian approach, the armistice was signed. The actual signatories were General Bodell Smith, representing General Eisenhower, and General Castellano, representing Marshal Badoglio. General Eisenhower and General Alexander were both present at the signing. Throughout the negotiations the Dominion Governments and the Soviet Government were kept informed day by day of the developments in the situation.

New Landings Reported

Three Allied Forces Drive Inland

THREE Allied forces are reported this morning to be striking inland from each corner of a great triangle to seize the whole of the Italian foot. On the west coast the Fifth Army, which includes British troops, is battling against strong German resistance beyond Salerno.

On the east coast British troops are following the retreating Germans north of Taranto. In Calabria the Eighth Army has made a 30-mile advance to occupy Catanzaro and San Eufemia. New Allied landings are reported.

Here are the latest reports from each sector:—

Salerno Front. — Reinforcements are pouring ashore on the beaches around Salerno, captured on Friday. As the Fifth Army pushes inland the Germans are hitting back strongly and fighting for every yard. Little definite news of the extent of the Fifth Army's progress is available, but things are apparently going well. The bridgeheads are now firmly established, and the landing of reinforcements is ahead of schedule.

Large fleets of cargo ships and landing craft are still putting men and material ashore, despite fierce air attacks

AIR BATTLES

Stiff air battles are taking place between big formations of Allied and German 'planes. The Germans are smashing at the ground troops with every fighter 'plane and bomber they can spare.

Algiers radio states that after fierce fighting German resistance was broken at several points and the Fifth Army was able to enlarge its bridgehead considerably.

Taranto-Brindisi Sector.—British troops are now less than 70 miles from the shores of Albania, and have control of Brindisi, covering the Adriatic entrance at the Straits of Otranto.

Brindisi was occupied by forces fanning out eastwards from Taranto. Other forces which landed at Taranto have now pushed north, and made contact with a German parachute division beyond the naval base. Occupation of Taranto and Brindisi gives the Allies control of the communications on the "heel."

The Allies also hold both ends of the most southerly cross-Italy railway linking Salerno with Taranto.

The Germans have imposed martial law in the territory occupied by them in Southern Italy.—(Reuter.)

Calabrian Sector.—Eighth Army troops, after a 30 miles advance in 24 hours, are now 75 miles beyond their original landing beaches, on a line running east-west through Catanzaro, and still pushing the Germans northward.

Algiers Radio reported that Bari had been occupied.

Paris Radio said there were new Allied landings on the Sorrento Peninsula opposite Capri. "The forces encountered fierce German opposition," it said. "Berlin military quarters point out that the main body of German troops in Italy have not yet been employed against the Allies."

Fighting between Italians and Germans is reported to be continuing in many towns and cities in Northern Italy. The food situation in Rome is said to be serious.—(Reuter.)

CONDITIONS IMPOSED

THE conditions of the military armistice were officially announced in London yesterday. They are:—

1. Immediate cessation of all hostile activity by Italian armed forces.

2. Italy will use its best endeavours to deny to Germans facilities that might be used against the United Nations.

3. All prisoners or internees of the United Nations immediately to be turned over to Allied Commander-in-Chief, and none of these may now or at any time be evacuated to Germany.

4. Immediate transfer of Italian Fleet and Italian aircraft to such points as may be designated by Allied Commander-in-Chief, with details of disarmament so prescribed by him.

5 Italian merchant shipping may be requisitioned by the Allied Commander-in-Chief to meet the need of the military and naval programme.

ALL TERRITORY

6. Immediate surrender of Corsica and all Italian territory, both of islands and mainland, to Allies for such use as operational bases and other purposes as Allies may see fit.

7. Immediate guarantee of free use by the Allies of all airfields and naval ports in Italian territory, regardless of the rate of evacuation of Italian territory by German forces. These ports and fields to be protected by Italian armed forces until this function is taken over by the Allies.

8. The immediate withdrawal to Italy of Italian armed forces from all participation in the current war from whatever area wherein they may now be engaged;

9. Guarantee by the Italian Government that, if necessary, it will employ all available armed forces to ensure prompt and exact compliance with all provisions of this armistice;

10. The Commander-in-Chief of the Allied forces reserved to himself the right to take any measure, which, in his opinion, may be necessary for the protection and interests of the Allied forces, for the prosecution of the war, and the Italian Government binds itself to take such administrative or other action as the Commander - in - Chief may require, and, in particular, the Commander-in-Chief will establish Allied military government over such parts of Italian territory as he may deem necessary in the military interests of the Allied Nations;

OTHER TERMS

11. The Commander - in - Chief, Allied forces, will have full right to impose the measures of disarmament, demobilisation and demilitarisation;

12. Other conditions of political, economic and financial nature, with which Italy will be bound to comply, will be transmitted at a later date;

13. The conditions of the present armistice will not be made public without the prior approval of the Allied Commander-in-Chief.

Sweden Rejects German Charges

The Swedish Government has rejected German accusations regarding the fishing boats sunk by the Germans, says Swedish Radio. "The Swedish Government maintains that no activity directed against the German armed forces took place," the announcer said. "The Swedish Government maintains its demands for damages, and expresses its expectation that shelling of Swedish fishing vessels without warning will not take place in future.

"The Swedish Legation in Berlin has been instructed to negotiate about fishing in the Kattegat and Skagerrack."—(Reuter.)

400 Dead in French Village

The German News Agency said last night that over 400 dead have been taken from beneath débris in Le Portel fishing village, near Boulogne, following Friday's raid.

There were also casualties in Boulogne, raided the same day.—(Reuter.)

May Declare War

AN A.P. message from the Italian frontier last night stated that a declaration of war by Italy against Germany was imminent, following proclamations to the people by the King of Italy and Marshal Badoglio.

The proclamations were broadcast from an unidentified radio station. The King of Italy stated that he had moved from Rome with the Government and high military authorities "to another point of national territory." He said that he authorised the request for an armistice "for the supreme good of the Fatherland and to avoid even graver suffering and greater sacrifices."

The King and Badoglio are believed to be in Sicily.—(Reuter and A.P.)

Doctor Chased in Hospital Grounds

Two pieces of cloth, resembling masks, were found by Gardai in Killarney Mental Hospital grounds, where, it was alleged, an attempt was made to attack Dr. Robert McCarthy, Assistant Medical Officer, in the early hours of Saturday morning.

Dr. McCarthy stated that, when cycling to his home in the grounds about 1 a.m., a man rushed at him from behind a cock of hay. The doctor dismounted and threw the bicycle at the man, who was then joined by others. Shouting for help, the doctor ran for his house, which he reached unmolested, though followed by one of the men.

Italian Warships in Allied Hands

THIRTY-FIVE Italian warships are now in Allied hands, with others on the way, Reuter stated last night.

All the Italian battleships are now accounted for. Only one uncompleted battleship has fallen into German hands. All the ships now at Malta, over 30, are expected to leave soon for an unknown destination.

Four of the battleships—including two of the modern 35,000 ton ships—are at Malta. The third modern ship, Roma, was sunk by German bombers while escaping from Spezia.

Here are the latest details of the whereabouts of the Italian battleships, as given in a Reuter despatch from Malta and a statement by an Allied naval spokesman:—

Littorio Class—Four ships, modern 35,000 ton battleships, with nine 15 in. guns;

Italia (ex-Littorio) and the Vittorio Veneto—At Malta; Roma—Sunk by German bombing attack on Friday between Corsica and Sardinia while on her way with an Italian squadron from Spezia; Impero—Reported by Italian spokesman to be still incomplete at Leghorn.

Cesare Class—Four ships, reconstructed in recent years, about 25,000 tons, with ten 12½ in. guns;

Caio Duilio and Andrea Doria—At Malta; Guiulio Cesaire and Conti de Cavour—Still at Taranto. One was wrecked and the other severely damaged during the Fleet Air Arm attack.

Fourteen submarines and a number of cruisers and destroyers have also arrived in Allied ports.

Algiers Radio stated last night: "An Allied naval spokesman has just revealed that 14 more Italian submarines and eight destroyers are on their way to Malta."

Three more Italian destroyers reached Malta yesterday. Further units are expected to surrender, and a number of merchantmen are coming into Allied ports.

German radio said that several Italian naval units in Durazzo harbour endeavoured to escape, but were prevented from doing so by the German Army.

C.-IN-C.'S VIEW

General Eisenhower, commenting at his H.Q. yesterday on the terms granted to the Italians, said that even if they gave the Allies no material beyond the possession of the Italian Fleet, that in itself made it wholly worth while.

The surrender of the fleet released an enormous part of the British fleet from the Mediterranean to reinforce sea-power at home, in the Indian Ocean and in the south-west Pacific. Since the Germans now had only submarines and E-boats in the Mediterranean, only the lightest forces would have to be retained in the Mediterranean to combat them.

Surrender of the Italian battleships means, says Reuter's Naval correspondent, that the entire British and American battle fleets, excepting only a force large enough to hold the Tirpitz and two German battle cruisers in northern European waters, can now be concentrated against Japan.

U.S. Firms' Secrets for Germany

MR. HENRY A. WALLACE, Vice-President of the United States, has charged American big business with holding up U.S. defence preparations before Pearl Harbour by deliberately restricting the production of synthetic rubber and by making available to Germany commercial secrets withheld from the United States Government.

Speaking at Chicago Stadium on Saturday night, at a United Nations' Committee meeting, he said that long before Pearl Harbour he took the initiative, as Secretary for Agriculture, in building up rubber stocks and starting production of synthetic rubber. "What I and 130,000,000 Americans did not know," he said, "was that the private rulers of world industry had their own private approach to synthetic rubber, on which there was a private treaty between a great American oil company and I. G. Farben, the German chemical colossus. The American Oil Company had to choose between loyalty to the United States and its commercial obligations to its German partner. It did three things:—

"It misled the Government as to the restrictive character of the patent situation; it assured Government officials that every effort would be made to bring about a large proportion of synthetic rubber for tyres, and then offered licences, which were deliberately oppressive, to prevent production of tyres from this rubber.

"For five years the production of Butyl rubber was held back, although the American Company had invented it and knew it possessed greater qualities than the German invention, Buna. Full information and regular reports were given to the German cartel partner, but the American Company tried to mislead the representative of the U.S. Navy, who was sent specifically to learn of Butyl. Another American cartel member felt obligated to send confidential information to Germany, which the U.S. War Department had requested it should not divulge."

Attacking isolationism as the screen behind which he claimed monopolistic cartels operated, Mr. Wallace said: "Our job is to fight these forces. These groups which rule over economic empires have usurped the sovereignty of the people in international relations. We shall soon know whether the common man shall have democracy first, or whether under the smooth phrase—'America first,' the common man shall be robbed.

"Beautiful advertisements and slick editorials say—'Let our soldiers come home to America as it used to be.' What they are really saying is—'Let us go back to normalcy, depressions, cartels, and a war every 25 years.'

"The time has come," Mr. Wallace concluded, "for a new declaration of freedom, which must cover freedoms we have not got, but which we must have."—(Reuter.)

Finland Regrets War with Britain

In one of the strongest declarations on Finland's position since the war began, a Finnish Government spokesman, who is unidentified, told Swedish and American correspondents, according to Reuter's special correspondent in Stockholm, that his country regretted the war with Britain—with which Finland had had friendly relations for 25 years—and wanted more intimate relations with the United States.

"In principle, Finland was enthusiastically in favour of Nordic union," he said. "The Russian war is Finland's own war. Finland is not led by or to anyone, but no peace is possible without guarantees."

Another Irish Movement

The Green Front, a new "anti-partition movement," was launched yesterday, when a public meeting was held in O'Connell street.

Mr. F. O'Carra, Director of the Organisation, said that only the mass support of the Irish people could help to publicise to the world "the crime of partition."

Richard Chichester Dupont, noted glider pilot and member of the Dupont family, was killed on Saturday in a glider crash during an experimental flight at Marchfield, California.—(Reuter.)

Short Head Victory for King of the Jungle

MRS. M. KING'S Friction ran on very gamely to win the Mooresfort Handicap at Baldoyle on Saturday, after a good finish with Carlist and Stop It, who deadheated for the minor places half a length behind.

Not Many Changes in Dublin Rugby Teams

THERE was a fairly large turnout at most of the Dublin Rugby grounds for the opening practices on Saturday, and it was gathered that while there will be changes in most of the teams these will not be many, and, on the whole, the senior sides will be much the same as last season.

Old Belvedere will be without Jimmy Byrne (scrum-half) and J. Henry (forward), but otherwise the cup-holders are likely to turn out as last season. Clontarf are unlikely to have any changes, but they hope to get the services of several schools' interprovincial players. H. Milroy captains the side.

Lansdowne is another club that is unlikely to show much change, and they may be strengthened by the addition of D. Hingerty, of U.C.D., while there is a possibility that they may be joined later in the season by Kevin O'Flanagan, also from U.C.D. They will be led this year by their winger, Noel Burke, and a good season is anticipated.

It is fairly certain that, as Donal Flanagan is playing soccer for Dundalk, he will not be turning out for Bective Rangers. It is hoped, however, that this loss will be offset by the addition of some of last year's U.C.D. men, McEntee, full-back, and the forwards, O'Donoghue and Fogarty. Bective will be able to rely on most of last year's players, with the exception of Des. O'Connor, who is retiring. A promising newcomer is the 100 and 220 yards youths' sprinter, Noel de Chenu.

Wanderers will be without the services of the Rev. T. R. Horan and last season's captain, C. A. Fox. Their pack, however, will be strengthened by the return of W. McManamey, who has been away for a couple of years in the North. He has been capped for Leinster, and last year played for Ulster against Leinster at Lansdowne road.

Old Wesley have lost two of their forwards, M. S. Rooney and J. K. White, but have been joined by a hooker from Trinity, L. C. Jacobson, and T. C. Trinder, a schools' interprovincial fullback. With Carey, Wolfe, the two McConnells and R. Lumley, who gave such an excellent display in the Cup last season, they are likely to field quite a useful side.

Steve Morrison leads Blackrock this season, and, while they will be unable to call on their interprovincial forward, J. Wall, they will be assisted by the schools' interprovincial winger, T. Burke, who was largely responsible for the College's success in the Senior Schools' Cup last season.

St. Mary's will line out virtually the same as last year, but Dublin University have lost their full-back, A. O'Connor, and T. Roche (wing-forward), while it is doubtful if Hugh de Lacey, their scrum-half, will be playing.

University College probably will be most depleted of all, but with such large stocks to draw from, their potentialities should not be lessened.

M. Aherne will lead a practically unchanged Monkstown team. The scrum-half, Holmes, and the long-kicking fullback, Jim Redmond, are doubtful starters for Palmerston, who, however, will be rejoined by their old scrum-half, T. Kearon, who has been assisting Civil Service in the North, while H. McClelland, a wing forward, may prove a notable addition.

Disappointing Display by Cork United

ST. JAMES'S GATE 5 CORK 0

AT Crumlin yesterday St. James's Gate kept the interest in the City Cup very much alive by sharing the points with the leaders on a scoreless draw. The huge crowd, however, must have been disappointed with Cork United, who gave one the impression that they had evolved a new technique. Perhaps, the rather "dead" ball cramped their style, but their display was in strong contrast to the smooth, methodical football that won them three League championships in a row.

Indeed, but for the virility of Hayes and Duffy, supported by the very excellent goalkeeping of Foley, the wholehearted display of the Gate might have brought about a major surprise.

Cork were most unimpressive forward. There was an indecision about a couple of the forwards that seemed to unbalance the line, and the play of the team as a whole suggested that this season they are not likely to sweep the decks. The Gate to a man put it all in. Their forwards were little better than the Cork five. But they gave Foley considerably more to do than the United gave Murtagh. That applies particularly to the first half, in which Jim Cork goalkeeper was never sure of Kinahan, Dunne and O'Rourke. Much of the Gate's partial success was due to the sterling play of "Joe" O'Reilly. Shields and Bagnall, who formed a very good middle line in front of Nolan and Murray, two very sound backs. O'Reilly played as well as ever.

Each side had many scoring chances, outstanding being the failure of the Cork centre-forward J. O'Reilly, who midway through the first half, after a partial clearance by Murtagh, had the ball at his feet, but missed a sitter, and the "certainty which Venner, the Cork left-winger, threw away in the second half, when, driving hard for goal from close range, he put the ball almost to the far corner flag. Kinahan might have scored for the Gate when close in, had he been a bit quicker off the mark. There was much clever football in it, but it was anything but a game to rouse the enthusiasm of the crowd to concert pitch.

ANOTHER DEFEAT FOR LIMERICK

SHELBOURNE.. 4 LIMERICK..... 1

Another masterly display of goalkeeping by Tierney and the consistently sound tackling and kicking of the Limerick backs, O'Mahony and Aherne, kept the scoring down at Shelbourne Park on Saturday. Shelbourne were value for more than their 4-1 victory, and if put to it might have added a few more, especially in the second half, when the Limerick forwards and half-backs seldom came into the picture. The penalty which Shelbourne scored after 22 minutes (gained when he netted from a pass from Crowe to give Rovers the lead. Seven minutes later Mulville equalised. Dyer put Drumcondra ahead in the 25th minute when he scored from a pass by McNamara in a melee in the goalmouth. McNamara scored the first of his three goals when he headed in a cross kick from Ward in the eighth minute after restarting. Twelve minutes later he came through in a solo effort to net his second, and in two minutes completed his hat-trick. Ward was fouled and McNamara headed in the subsequent free, giving Drumcondra a 5-1 lead. Ward gave them the sixth goal in the 30th minute when he beat Flynn with a good drive from outside the penalty area. Rovers got their only goal in the 35th minute when Coad netted.

COCHRANE SCORES "HAT TRICK"

IRELAND..... 4 BRITISH XI.... 2

Giving a polished display of football, Ireland defeated the British team, composed of English, Scottish and Welsh players, at Windsor Park, Belfast, on Saturday. Stevenson, of Everton, the former Dublin Dolphin player, was the brightest star of a brilliant forward line, and he and Cochrane gave Leslie Compton a hectic afternoon.

Doherty and McAlinden also played clever football, and Bonnar finding his form in the second half, the line moved like a well-oiled machine. Cochrane performed the hat trick, and Stevenson got the fourth and best goal of the match, taking the ball on the volley to give Swift no chance. Westcott and Powell scored for the British XI.

Death of Tim O'Keeffe

The Irish international and Inter-League forward, Tim O'Keeffe, died on Saturday in the Bon Secour Home, Cork, at the age of 33. A brilliant left or inside left wing forward, he was on the Cork team that won the A.I.C. Cup in 1935-4, and on the Cork side when they ran up for the trophy in 1935-36. Later he played for Waterford, Limerick and Cork United, and in Scotland he made a name for himself with Hibernians and Raith Rovers.

Yesterday at Crumlin a striking tribute was paid to the memory of O'Keeffe. St. James's Gate and Cork United lined up before the start, and the huge crowd stood in silence as the buglers of the Transport Workers' Band played the "Last Post." It was the most impressive scene ever witnessed on an Association football ground in this country. At Tolka Park, where Drumcondra and Shamrock Rovers met, a two minutes' silence was also observed.

ELM PARK TENNIS

Results of the hard court championships at Elm Park on Saturday were:—
Men's Singles. Third round—A. E. Fannin beat E. P. O'Kelly—6-1, 6-4. Fourth round—C. A. Kemp beat T. J. Lydon—6-3, 6-4.

FINE INNINGS BY L. ARMSTRONG

Waringstown and Clontarf, winners of the Ulster and Leinster Senior Cups respectively, played an exciting cricket match at Castle avenue. The chief feature of the game was a fine innings of 58 not out by L. Armstrong for Waringstown. Mahony and Ruddock batted brightly for Clontarf. Score:—

Red Cross and Treatment of Tuberculosis

An outline of their short-term proposal for immediate action against tuberculosis will be submitted to the Congress of the Municipal Authorities' Association of Ireland, to be held in Wexford tomorrow and on Wednesday and Thursday, by the Anti-Tuberculosis Section of the Red Cross Society.

On the subject of diagnosis the report of the section states that patients present themselves for examination only at an already advanced stage of the disease. It is their aim to assist the local tuberculosis officer by propaganda and survey work in schools and factory communities, where children and young people congregate. Treatment is dependent on early diagnosis, but it is even more dependent on the existence of effective accommodation for those who are found to be suffering from tuberculosis. The Red Cross would aim at attaining, with the assistance of the local authorities and the Government, a sufficient number of beds to cover the needs of the locality in which it was conducting its intensive campaign.

Under the head of rehabilitation the report says that public co-operation of the closest possible kind between the public authorities, employers of labour, trade unions and the workers themselves is absolutely necessary. The Red Cross estimates that it will be necessary, if minimum provision is to be made under these three heads, to spend a very great deal more than now is being spent in every locality on the tuberculosis services.

The scheme which has been approved by the anti-tuberculosis section is chosen for population units of 10,000 to 15,000 people. The Red Cross is willing to finance wholly the initial stages of one experimental unit scheme if a local authority agrees to take on, after the first year or two, a steadily rising percentage of the cost on a scale which will amount, for such a population unit, to a sum of approximately £10,000 to £15,000 a year, so far as can be judged by the material before them. In one region in America where this plan has been put into operation the number of deaths from tuberculosis has been reduced by two-thirds in ten years. Furthermore, since each local authority is recouped as to fifty per cent. of the money spent on tuberculosis, the full maximum cost to the rates of one such unit scheme would not be more, according to their provisional calculations, than £5,000 to £7,500 a year.

Preventorium Opened

St. Mary's Irish Red Cross Preventorium at Ballyroan, County Dublin, for children suffering from primary infection of tuberculosis, was opened yesterday by Mr. Justice Conor Maguire, President of the Irish Red Cross Society, and blessed by the Most Rev. Dr. McQuaid, Archbishop of Dublin.

Mr. Justice Conor Maguire said that the idea of the Preventorium was that of the Red Cross, who had provided all the money for reconstruction and equipment. Larger plans for dealing with tuberculosis would soon be made known. Credit for what had been done was due first to the Archbishop, who discovered the site and gave a gift of £1,000.

TAME END TO YACHTING SEASON

The wind-up of the Dublin Bay Sailing Club's season on Saturday was decidedly tame, and of the six matches started only two were sailed to a finish. The two matches completed were those for the Mermaids and Wags, and both finished late, the former class only just escaping the time disqualification. First boat home in this division was Oonagh (E. Booth), and she came home over 20 minutes ahead of Amy to secure the special Thursday evening prize for the winning line. This pair, in fact, were the only ones of the fleet to complete the course, all others giving up before the close.

The Wags, who were racing for the Commodore's prize, turned out in great strength, and Mollie (R. Pilkington), slipping away with a lead at the starting gun, was never overhauled, and won by 4 mins. 55 secs. from Coquette (G. H. Jones), with Penelope third, Insistern of the latter, and then Pansy, Phyllis, Maureen, Vega, Blue Bird, Shindilla and Barbara as named. The special prize was won by Mollie, and club prizes on handicap were won by Penelope and Pansy.

Cruisers—Special long-distance handicap sailed yesterday: Windward (scr.), 6-22-30; Bonita (8 mins.), 6-40-20; Sonia (scr.), 6-55-0. Mercia, Marie and Vega gave up.

Thrust Against Italy

The mystery investing Italy's surrender has been lightened by the Press Association's diplomatic correspondent, whose long statement manifestly is based upon official information. It appears that the first overtures for peace were made in the first week of August—barely a week after the fall of Fascism—when the Allies were approached via diplomatists in two neutral States. The Italians, who described their situation as "desperate," were faced by a demand for unconditional surrender. Next, an Italian envoy, a general, visited the British Ministers at Madrid and Lisbon, where he received the Allied conditions. Among those conditions was an insistence that the Italian Government would not proclaim the armistice before it should be proclaimed by General Eisenhower. Marshal Badoglio, who did not receive the terms for some time afterwards, demurred, asking for a postponement of the news until an actual Allied landing took place. The British insisted—although, in the fact, the invasion did precede the surrender—but, between the comings and goings of the various envoys, it was not until last week that the armistice was announced. Its terms were issued last night. Their effect is to ensure, as far as possible that the Italians shall deny all help to the Germans, and shall afford it in the fullest measure to the Allies. All anti-Allied activity is to cease; all Allied prisoners and internees must be handed over; aircraft and the Fleet must come under Allied control, while merchant shipping must be requisitioned; all Italian territory, including her island possessions—and Corsica—may be used for the purposes of war; Italians serving elsewhere must be recalled; and any necessary measures that the Allied Commander-in-Chief may wish to adopt for the prosecution of the war must be assisted by the Italians, if he so desires. These terms, of course, represent, from the Allied point of view, a counsel of perfection. It will be impossible, or at least extremely difficult, to fulfil some of them. According to General Eisenhower himself, the Italian Air Force has been weakened during the past three months, having been broken up into small units under German supervision. As for the Italian troops in the Balkans and on the Russian front, their return will be no easy task. In the north of Italy, where powerful German units exist, any Italian attempts at co-operation with the Allies will be perilous in the extreme.

Nevertheless, as General Eisenhower says, the possession of the Italian Navy alone makes the armistice worth while. News of its whereabouts is coming in by dribs and drabs. Evidently, the entire battle-fleet, with the exception of one vessel which has been sunk by the Germans, is in Allied ports. Concerning the vessels which were not ready for sea, the news is less decisive; but Reuter announces that more than 30 Italian vessels of all types have reached Malta, and it is reported from Algiers that 22 more are on their way. Meanwhile, what appears to be one of the fiercest battles of the whole war is being fought to the north of Salerno, where General Clark's Fifth Army landed towards the close of last week; and a German report indicates that a fresh American landing has taken place at Sorrento, on the southern tip of the Bay of Naples—just around the corner, as it were, from Salerno. In the other two theatres of attack, the British forces under General Montgomery are making consistent progress. Having occupied Taranto, on the inner side of the "heel" of Italy last Thursday, they have thrust eastwards, and have captured the very important port of Brindisi, on the outside of the "heel"—a prize of immense value, in view of its position at the narrow entrance to the Adriatic. In Calabria, the "toe," the advancing British have gained possession of Catanzaro, and seem to be advancing with all speed. The real battle, however, will not begin until the Allies come into contact with the main strength of the German defence, which is north of Rome. Only the most nebulous reports come from that region. There are vague stories of sharp fighting between German and Italian troops—so vague that two contradictory accounts exist concerning the occupation of Turin. A Swiss agency declares that all communication—by rail, telephone and telegraph—between north, central and southern Italy has been interrupted. The condition of Rome itself seems to be quiet: the Italian authorities announce that traffic services will be resumed to-day. It is sadly evident, however, that the city will not escape scot-free when the great clash comes, and both belligerents fight by might and main for the possession of the great railway system that runs through it. How many other historic and beautiful cities will suffer, nobody can foresee.

Antipodes

New Zealand has long been the envy of many other countries for the scope of its social services. Before the Beveridge Plan was ever heard of this small Dominion had established its social security schemes, which put to shame the efforts of many greater countries. New Zealand has been pointed out, like Sweden, as an example of a supremely successful attempt to reconcile the principle of private enterprise with an assured standard of living for all citizens. In some respects, there are parallels between Ireland and New Zealand, though the total area of the former is much the greater. Both nations depend primarily upon agriculture for their wealth; both are well endowed by nature. The population of New Zealand is about half that of the twenty-six counties. The difference in social services, however, may be gauged from the statements of Mr. W. J. Jordan, New Zealand High Commissioner in London. The problem of a national medical service, as he explains, has been solved, by an ingenious system. Doctors and chemists function in the ordinary way; patients attend any practitioner they choose, are treated, and pay the bill. They then take the receipt to the Post Office, where the State repays the whole cost of the treatment. Basic fees for consultation, visits and night calls have been fixed, with a special mileage allowance. Regulations exist to penalise patients who consult doctors unnecessarily. This plan has not been put into practice without some opposition from the British Medical Association; but it is claimed by Mr. Fraser, the Prime Minister, that many of the doctors are very much in favour of the scheme. Old age pensions are paid at a rate which gives married couples, at the age of sixty, an income of £3 5s. a week, and a means test is applicable only to persons who have more than £500 in the bank and own their own houses. Blind people receive a pension of 30s. a week, and, in order to encourage them to industry, the Government adds a bonus of 25 per cent. to anything they earn by their own exertions. Farm labourers receive, in addition to board and lodgings, a minimum wage of £2 17s. 6d. a week, and are entitled to eighteen days' holiday, with pay, every year. Recently a Rehabilitation Board has been set up, with wide powers, to assist ex-Service men and women, after demobilisation, by educational grants, direct loans, purchase of tools, equipment or land, and so on. These signal achievements, by the Government of a small country, are an excellent example of the vigour of democracy, when its leaders are elected for the breadth of their vision, and not for the length of their memories.

FILM NOTES

FROM OUR CINEMA CORRESPONDENT.

Hit Parade of 1943 (Adelphi).—Bright, new swing numbers sound fine (sometimes), but the ups and downs of their pre-natal period are dreary and unattractive, although they have an irresistable appeal for some film directors. I always feel that they are hard-up for a story into which they can pack all the music and dancing they have in mind when they adopt one of these back-stage themes. That, however, is merely prejudice. If you want spectacular screen variety, with a number of catchy tunes, try this film. Susan Hayward and John Carroll both have good voices. Susan, by the way, is a young woman who has nearly everything necessary to keep her right up on top of the screen world. By way of contrast, Apache Trail is the screen adaptation of one of Ernest Haycox's magazine stories of the old West, and provides thrilling fights on the prairie, with romance by William Lundigan and Donna Reed.

Money for Jam (Carlton).—Damon Runyon's humour is a kind that I, personally, do not specialise in, so I could not expect to be amused by the screen version of one of his novels. Even allowing for the fact that Runyon means something to you, you may find yourself hard put to trace the connection between a sick horse, called Finnegan, the singing of Patsy O'Connor, a song and dance act by negro furniture removers, and, among other irrelevancies, a bit of ballet on roller skates. Yes, it sounds crazy, but that is just what it is like. Abbott and Costello are there, too.

Clive of India (Savoy).—When historical films are good, they are "very, very good," and this one falls into that category. Clive's career is excellent material for a discerning director, and Richard Boleslawski has given a balanced interpretation of the story of Clive, the man, and Clive, the soldier-statesman. Ronald Colman, in the title part, will be remembered by those who saw the film when it was shown in Dublin before, and there is a strong supporting company, including Loretta Young. When we, in Dublin, are denied some of the latest products of British studios, re-issues such as this should come our way more often.

The Sisters (Metropole).—Another re-issue, this time from American studios, gives us a chance to see Bette Davis in one of her best-known dramatic rôles. She is a young woman who has run the gamut of emotion of every kind during her screen career, and this time she has Errol Flynn and the San Francisco earthquake to work on. An exciting and popular film, striking an authentic period note.

Chatterbox (Corinthian).—Another comedy Western, all about life on a "dude" ranch. Joe E. Brown has his fans, which is just as it should be, and so has Judy Canova. After all, "folks tak' diffesent views of things," which is all to the good. "The Anchor" is another ranch film, but much more grim. Wild Bill Saunders (Bill Elliott) is one of those wandering, philanthropic cowboys, who flourish like a green bay tree (on the screen, at any rate), and clears up a spot of bother.

False Faces (Queens).—A thrilling gangster drama, featuring Richard Arlen and Virginia Bruce.

Dixie Dugan (Royal) is just another variation on the theme of youth and the war situation. When Hollywood starts out on films with a moral it is never hard to see the moral—if you don't see it in one film you'll surely see it in the other 999. This is a likeable enough film with a new personality in young Lois Andrews, who is worth introducing. James Ellison, that veteran youth, is the male lead. Charlie Ruggles's benign maturity is a good foil for these.

ABBEY THEATRE SCHOOL PLAY

It is a most interesting experience to sit through a 54 years old play, like Lennox Robinson's "The Cross Roads," and find how applicable it is to modern times and how much of its point still finds a billet in Irish conditions. Time has marched on since 1909, but conditions in rural Ireland, and the characters which Lennox Robinson depicted then, have marked time or have changed but very little.

Seeing the members of the Abbey Theatre School present it yesterday left no doubt of the time-lag in Irish agriculture. It was admirably done, rather stiffly in the prologue, perhaps, but loosening up in the first act, and providing fine, sustained playing in the last scene. Kitty O'Brien carried the play as the Co. Cork girl who set out to do good for her country by reorganising agricultural methods, and she had able support, especially in the final act, by Liam Gannon, who gave a much better performance as Ellen's husband than of Henry Blake. Two other well-taken parts were those of Ellen's mother, by Katherine Golden, and Mrs. Desmond, a neighbour, by Anna Kearns. Others in the cast were Brian O'Higgins, James Neylin and A. Anderson.

TRAINING COURSES FOR AUCTIONEERS

Courses have been arranged for those anxious to qualify as auctioneers, valuers and estate agents, it was announced at a meeting of the Council of the Irish Auctioneers' and Estate Agents' Association in Dublin.

The courses, which have been drafted by the Association and the City of Dublin Vocational Education Committee, will last for two and a half years.

SILENT IRISH SPEAKERS IN GALWAY

They had found it hard to get one Irish speaker in Galway to stand on their platform, said Micheal O Corbain, Dublin, addressing a public meeting under the auspices of Gluin na Buaidhe in Galway yesterday in support of the language revival movement. Many Irish speakers were in the language movement only for what they could get out of it. They should get rid of such traitors to the cause.

CHINA INLAND MISSION

DEATH.

REYNOLDS—September 12, 1943, Margaret, beloved wife of Joseph Reynolds, Court House, Nenagh. Remains will be removed to St. Mary's of the Rosary at 7 o'clock (S.T.) this (Monday) evening. Funeral to Lisboney at 1 o'clock (S.T.) to-morrow (Tuesday), after High Mass.

CRUISKEENLAWN

By Myles na gCopaleen

THROUGH some bungling in the drafting of the Constitution, it seems I have no power to review or reverse judgments of the District Court. Some one has blundered—I was given a promise that this would be seen to. One cannot rely on these civil service officials, who seem to spend most of their time discussing some mysterious sibilant ossification known as the bone-hiss. Get the drop of my life a month ago when the true position was brought to my notice. Some drunk called to my lodgings to complain about a fine of forty shillings. I was tired—up all night with the new fire-box drawings ordered by Glenavy—but I heard him out and decided that forty shillings was a wee bit stiff. The man was anæmic and would be easily upset by twelve glasses of whiskey. Remitted the fine, applied the Probation Act, but issued a firmly-worded warning. No more boozing, look after family and wife, stern times, every man at his post, watchword eternal vigilance. When I rang up the Guards next day to have the technical details fixed up, extraordinary row on the phone. What did I mean? By what right did I seek to meddle with the decisions of judges? Some mention of an incomprehensible public-house derision—contempt of court. Would do well to mind my own business (—me, mind you, that never opened, not to mention closed, a shop in my life). The Guards were quite definite about it all. They made it clear that if I persisted in my attempt to alter the decision, I would get that brief German text short schrift.

Well, a pity. I dissent from the judgment of Justice Reddin at Balbriggan when he accepted the plea of a Gárda Superintendent that on the occasion of a late dance, the sale of intoxicants should be permitted to men only. A licence issued on that basis is not compatible with the Constitution, my honour's conception of human liberty, commonsense, or the dignity of womanhood. Moreover, it is a reflection on the traditional robustness of the male inasmuch as it takes judicial notice of the fiction, widely held but of no substance, that a man's life is in danger if, being present at a dance, one of three conditions is not fulfilled, viz.: (a) that he is drinking intoxicating liquor; (b) that he has drunk intoxicating liquor; (c) that he is about to slip out to let two or three blazing taiskauns down the hatch. Even assuming that this is a reasonable theory, I know of no biological law which enables females to satisfy from internal sources a need met in the case of males by the consumption of nocturnal tonics.

Furthermore, in the view of my honour the decision of the Justice is not well made in law. The terms of any such licence would appear to embody certain imponderables not amenable to juridical definition. What is intoxicating liquor? Is it what my uncle Mick can take by the ten-glass bottle when out on his coursing trials without turning a hare? Is it what my uncle Sam can take by the gallon at his improvised cricket meetings without batting an oil-lid? Is the liquid intoxicating if it does not intoxicate? What is a man? What is a woman? Is an overgrown lout of 17 a man? Is the sale of intoxicating solids permissible? Is it in order to give whiskey to a man, even if he enters the bar, not walking on the floor but is, eccentrically enough, on that discarded fenestral furnishing, a blind?

Balbriggan I know well. It is a fine town but it cannot compare with Ballybrophy. When I visit Ballybrophy, the Justice there permits me to sit with him on the bench. No Ballybrophy judgment has ever been questioned or reversed.

OBITUARY

EX-SENATOR McLAUGHLIN

The death took place on Saturday, in a Dublin nursing home, of Mr. John McLaughlin, Buncrana, Co. Donegal, a former Senator and one of the best-known public men in the North-West of Ireland. He had been engaged in politics from early manhood, and, as a platform speaker, he was extremely effective. Mr. McLaughlin took part in organising the Sinn Fein movement in the North-West, and during the troubles he rendered notable service. He was a strong supporter of the late General Collins in the conflict over the Treaty. He was nominated a member of the first Senate by Mr. Cosgrave, and he remained a Senator until the last election. Mr. McLaughlin had large industrial interests in Kilkenny and Buncrana, and was director of a newspaper in Sligo.

MR. THOMAS CULLEN

The Mayor (Alderman William Jones) and members and officials of the Waterford Corporation attended in state at the funeral of Mr. Thomas Cullen, which took place yesterday from Waterford Cathedral to the Holy Cross Cemetery, Tramore. Mr. Cullen had been an alderman and councillor of the Waterford Corporation for 28 years. He was also a member of the Waterford Mental Hospital Committee of Management, the County Board of Public Assistance, the Holy Ghost Hospital Board and Waterford Harbour Commissioners.

OLIVIA KNIGHT

Erected on the house in which she was born 114 years ago, the Venerable Archdeacon Fallon, the 87 years old parish priest of Castlebar, unveiled there yesterday a memorial plaque to Olivia Knight, known as Thomasine of the Nation, who emigrated to Australia, became the wife of Dr. Hope Connolly, and died in 1908. Among those who wrote paying tribute to her memory was Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy, whose father, Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, was associated with her in social service work in Australia, and who fifty years ago had her poems collected and published.

BULGARIANS OCCUPY MORE TERRITORY

The Bulgarian Army is to occupy more Balkan territory, probably between the Albanian border and the Vardar River in Serbia, says the Hungarian radio. "This area," it added, "is one where Bulgarian national aspirations are strongest. Bulgaria's future attitude is a pointer to developments in the Balkans."—(Reuter.)

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Kiev

Kiev, towards which the Russian drive through the Ukraine is aimed, has been in the hands of the Germans since very early in the Russo-German war, and is the pivot of their whole front in the south. The city, which is about the size of Dublin, occupies a unique position in the life of Russia.

In the waters of the Dnieper, opposite the town, Vladimir, the first saint of the Russian Church, baptised the converts, and here were established the first Christian Church, the first Christian school, and the first library in Russia. Kiev still—I speak, of course, of pre-war days—possesses one of the finest libraries in the Soviet Union, and it has seven university colleges and seventeen technical schools.

Kiev was established as early as the ninth century, on the great trade route between Scandinavia and Byzantium, and had a very chequered history. It came into Russian hands in 1667. Since the Revolution, in which it took a prominent part, its industry has expanded greatly, and the population has been trebled in the last fifty years.

Saint Joan

I am delighted to see that Shelah Richards's production of Shaw's "Saint Joan" is back on the boards in Dublin this week. When she appeared in the play a few months ago at the Olympia I thought that her performance was one of the most moving and impressive that the Dublin theatre has seen for a long time. This, by the way, is entirely an unsolicited testimonial.

At that time there was some doubt whether the lavish costumes necessary for the production would be obtainable, and a wire was sent to the author, inquiring whether he would permit the performance of the play, if necessary, in modern dress. I believe that Mr. Shaw's reply, which was addressed to Miss Richards at "Dan Lowry's Palace of Varieties, Dublin," said something like this:—

"Saints must retain their sanctity, especially in Ireland."

The costumes for this new Gaiety production, I see, were originally made for the film "Henry V."

A Historic Derby

A correspondent reminds me that Mr. T. K. Laidlaw, who died at Castleknock last Thursday, is entitled to a place of some importance in the history of horse-racing by reason of the fact that he bred Aboyeur, winner of the Derby of 1913.

Aboyeur was by Desmond, out of Pawky, a dam that produced nothing else of particular note for Mr. Laidlaw.

The race was notable for the objection lodged by the Stewards against Craiganour, which had finished a shade in front of Aboyeur. They alleged that Craiganour had interfered with other horses and had not kept a straight course, so they disqualified him and gave the race to Aboyeur, which had started at 100 to 1 against.

The action of the Stewards caused some feeling at the time; for neither the owner nor jockey of Aboyeur had objected to Craiganour.

Citizen Army History

Although "The History of the Citizen Army," by R. M. Fox—reviewed in this newspaper recently—has been on sale only a few weeks, a second edition is already being printed. The first has sold out. In fact, the history is said to have sold better than any book published in Ireland for years.

Messrs. Duffy were embarrassed, because, although they had had a thousand copies bound, they could not supply the orders which poured in. The second thousand copies, which were hurriedly bound, failed to stem the rush.

A curious fact is that the book is as popular in Britain as it is in Ireland. Its appeal appears to be not so much the national conflict as the vivid description of Dublin's turbulent industrial struggles, early in the century.

QUIDNUNC.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
SUNDAY NIGHT.

"WHEN I hear people say that the British workingman is revolutionary I reply, 'Yes, about as revolutionary as a plum pudding.' If he were not, he would never have put up with the present snail's pace in education and other reform," declared Dr. J. J. Mallon, B.B.C. Governor and Warden of Toynbee Hall, yesterday. Dr. Mallon attributed to-day's low cultural and spiritual standard to a system under which the school-leaving age had not changed in forty years—a period in which radio, films, motor cars, aviation and like developments had transformed the very order of physical resistance. Four out of five children still left school at 14—something like a sentence of mental death—and in the East End could be seen the sadness of the deterioration which could take place in a child's physique and
